A.1. Introduction

A.1.1 System Overview

<< State the brief purpose of the system to which this manual applies. >>

Please note that if your project does not need a user manual, but a system administrator’s manual, you can tailor this template to fit your project. On the other hand, if you need both End user’s manual and System administrator’s manual, please separate into two documents. >>

The Yanomamo Interactive DVD has been developed as a course supplement for Department of Anthropology Professors and to allow current anthropology students to learn about the Yanomamo tribe, using various interesting and interactive features such as the video of the tribe, statistical information, genealogy tree of the tribe members, etc.

A.1.2 System Requirements

<< Describe the minimum hardware and software (Operating System, etc.) requirements for the system. >>

.1.2.1 Hardware Requirements

Any Computing platform (Desktop PC or Laptop) with Windows OS (XP, Vista, Windows 7 or 8), or Mac OS and an operational disk drive.

.1.2.2 Software Requirements

Any modern browser on either Windows or Mac OS workstation that is HTML5 compliant such as Mozilla Firefox 9+, IE 9+, Google Chrome, Safari 10+, etc.

.1.2.3 Other Requirements

None.
A.2. Installation Procedures

<< In a system where the end user is expected to install the product, the Installation Instructions can be included in the user’s guide. For complicated installation where qualified service staff is needed, a separate Installation Manual should be documented.

If your system does not need any installation, you can skip this section. >>
System does not need installation, as the dvd only has to be inserted into the dvd drive and the html page stored in it has to be double-clicked.

A.2.1 Initialization procedures

<< Describe first-time installation procedures. >>

A.2.2 Re-installation

<< Describe procedures for reinstalling the system (e.g., to recover from a corrupt installation). >>

A.2.3 De-installation

<< Describe procedures for removing the system. >>
A.3. Operational Procedures

<< Briefly describe functions available to the user and describe the step-by-step procedures for accessing these functions. Include the following information, as applicable:

- Initialization: Describe any procedures needed to initialize the software. Identify any initialization options available to the user.
- User Functions: Describe the functions available to the user. For each function describe: User inputs including format, limitations, input method, etc., Operational results.

Please note that if you are using any NDI/ COTS/ Open Source product and the operational procedures are available, please do not repeat them here, instead, please provide the reference. >>
